

Sheringham Distillery Produces some of the Best Gin in the World

Sheringham Distillery has been awarded and celebrated for producing some of the best gin in the world. The distillery's international accolades are understandable once you taste their unmistakably recognizable spectrum of libations that offer a smooth balance only a chef's palate could perfect. Jason MacIsaac, Sheringham's Master Distiller and Co-Founder, spent decades of his career as a top chef in Michelin-star restaurants and as a private chef for a royal family. Jason brings his chef-approach to flavor profile creation and distillation, crafting the conceptualization of an experience into spirits, like the perfectly curated menu or fine wine.

Sheringham sources only the highest quality ingredients and has no limitations when dreaming up spirit flavor profiles. A marine biologist and friend of the owners' sustainably harvests winged kelp from the Pacific Ocean, a notable botanical you'll find in Sheringham's flagship spirit, Seaside Gin (World's Best, World Gin Awards, 2019). Botanicals in their Kazuki Gin (Gold, World Gin Awards, 2021) include Japanese Cherry blossoms and yuzu peel, and green tea leaves and florals from WestHolme Tea Farm – the only Canadian tea producers growing rare terroir tea commercially.

Jason started Sheringham Distillery in 2015 with his business partner and wife, Alayne MacIsaac, the visionary and driving force behind Sheringham today. Sheringham was built on the history and homage of the region where the distillery began. Years before Sheringham originated, in a small town on Vancouver Island, Jason discovered a number of unearthed prohibition-era moonshine bottles rumored to originate from an old hotel that operated a still in the basement cellar. This discovery led to the timeless Sheringham glass bottle that they use today. Embossed in every bottle is their signature sailboat, reminiscent of "Favorite" – a historical handcrafted schooner that once sailed around the town's nearby Salish sea. The name, Sheringham, is borrowed from the original name of the town where the first distillery began. The town later changed its name to Shirley – to fit on a postage stamp when the first post office was built. As Sheringham grows, they stay true to their West Coast roots, sharing with the world a piece of paradise.

For more information visit www.sheringhamdistillery.com

For brand assets visit Sheringham's public marketing library.

For more articles visit Sheringham's public article library.